Kendal at Oberlin Residents Association

October 2020
Volume XXVII, Number 10

Harvest Moon Festival
Thursday, Oct. 1 - 7:15pm - Heiser Circle

Please gather to share our gratitude for what we, as a community, have accomplished while in lockdown.

Make a poster stating what you are grateful for – Leadership, Staff, Safety.

Art supplies will be available in the Art Studio, Sept. 23 - Oct. 1.

During that week, leave a message on paper-covered tables along the windows in Heiser Lounge describing what has meant the most to you during this time.

We will each have a candle to light the circle around the pond during a short program.

Bring a chair if you need it.

Eleven years ago Kendal at Oberlin residents decided to celebrate our annual anniversary in a very special way – not with an elegant dinner, but with a simple supper. The savings, along with generous donations from Kendal residents and staff, were given to Oberlin Community Services to use for its many outreach efforts. Thus began a tradition that last year raised $7,600 for OCS!

In these pandemic times, the tradition must change. We can no longer gather together for dinner. But we can still enjoy a “simple supper” delivered to our homes by Kendal Dining Services on Wed., October 21, and remember the needs faced by Oberlin Community Services as it helps our friends and neighbors.

Margie Flood, executive director of OCS, will speak to us during our Zoom Exchange program on Thurs., Oct. 15, to update us on their efforts. She notes that in the last fiscal year, OCS provided 48,000 separate points of service to county residents in need, including 1,674 Oberlin community members: 14% of the clients were seniors, 53% adults, and 33% children. Most of this service has involved the provision of food, including thousands of pounds of fresh produce.

COVID-19 has changed operations, but the increasing demand is still being met through OCS’s adaptability and the generous support of the community. Kendal’s “Souper Supper” is an important way to contribute to and thereby facilitate the work of this vital community group.

Soup kettles will be placed in Heiser Lounge ALL DAY Mon., Oct. 19, through Wed., Oct. 21, to collect your cash or check donations (made out to Oberlin Community Services). Please give generously to support OUR community. ~The Editors

Having previously lived in different parts of the country, I have been impressed as a new OCS board member by the many important social services OCS provides to the Oberlin community. It’s not just a food bank; it also coordinates a number of services often provided by state agencies in other states. Truly, OCS is a way we at Kendal can be good neighbors, especially when many folks are suffering during this COVID crisis. ~Carl Whitehouse

EXCHANGES WITH BARBARA THOMAS
THURSDAYS AT 4:00PM
Zoom, KOTV, WSCC
The current pandemic has sparked many positive new opportunities, including greater communication among Kendal affiliates. I have been in several Zooms with the presidents of the other Kendal Associations. We have shared information regarding the make-up of our various communities, and in the most recent meeting, we reported how each Kendal is coping with the pandemic. For the most part, life at each place looks much the same, with a few interesting variations on the theme of staying safe and happy. One concern we all had was how to keep a warm, caring, and engaged community ethos.

I recently asked some of our KORA Councilors how they thought we were doing with this challenge here at Kendal at Oberlin. The responses were immediate:

• “So much is going on.”
• “We have maintained a surprising sense of community.”
• “Zoom has taken our communication to a new level.”
• “This crisis has called for innovation.”
• “The Bulletin Board is filling again.”
• “New TV options have been a silver lining.”
• “Deeper appreciation for what we were and hopeful anticipation for what we will be.”
• “Our library has become ever more important.”
• “Personal creativity abounds.”
• “Our values are holding constant despite the challenges.”

I am certain that many of you could add more examples of how our community is working to make lemonade out of this bunch of lemons that has been dropped on us.

On other matters, at its most recent meeting, KORA Council received from the Coordination Committee a report regarding two groups. The Program Committee has disbanded its subcommittee for Third Thursday Lectures, with appreciation for this program across the years and for those who led it.

Additionally reported was the creation of a new special purpose group, The Study of Biblical Literature Interest Group. This is a reorganization of the long-standing Bible Study that was facilitated by Christ Episcopal Church. Malcolm Peel is the contact person.

At the October 15 Council meeting, which will once again be a Zoom event broadcast on KOTV, the Council will consider the agenda items to be presented to the KORA Annual Meeting on November 12. Plans are underway to determine how all residents might participate actively in this meeting.

LifeLong Learning Classes at Kendal for Fall 2020

What We've Learned about the COVID-19 Virus; Nov. 3, 10, 17; 10:30am-12:00pm. Yolanda Cruz, Robert S. Danforth Professor of Biology at Oberlin College. This course will be taught via Zoom. To sign up to receive an invitation to the Zoom sessions, contact Rebecca Cardozo. No fee.

COVID-19 is offering us valuable lessons about immunity, viral diseases, and pandemics. What are we to make of such lessons? This three-part lecture series will explain why COVID-19 has been so dangerous, what immunity means, and what could lie ahead in a post-COVID-19 world. The first session asks: Why is COVID-19 so dangerous? How does it kill? How might it damage victims who survive it? The second focuses on: What does immunity mean? Since we have an immune system, why can’t we fight this virus better? Why are some people more vulnerable than others? The third examines: What is the (near) future of COVID-19? Will there be a vaccine? What drugs have been found useful in mitigating the ravages of the virus?

Judy Cook

Judy Cook, Kendal resident and musician, tells the story of one family’s home and farm life during the Civil War through excerpts of family letters, songs of the Civil War, and projected images. Esther Claflin, Judy’s great-grandmother, was married to a Wisconsin farmer who was drafted at age 40. She and their two teenaged sons kept the small farm going. Dennis Cook, as the voice of Gilbert Claflin and his sons, reads from their letters. Judy, in costume, reads from Esther’s letters, plays tunes of the time, and sings songs of the Civil War. Throughout the program you will see projected photos of the day, works of art, and lyrics of the choruses. The audience is invited to join in the singing.

Join us for a virtual 2020 Oberlin Community Candidates Night from October 1 through November 3. Hear from the candidates in the comfort of your home via social media!

Since OCCN could not host its annual in-person gathering to meet the candidates, it decided to record a series of “Candidates in Conversation.” All candidates in contested races on the Oberlin ballot were invited to participate in a Zoom conversation in late September, without an audience. Each candidate presented an opening and a closing statement and answered a series of questions posed by a volunteer moderator. Members of the community and OCCN planning committee members submitted the questions for the candidates.

Each “Candidates in Conversation” session lasts no more than 30 min., and all are now posted for viewing on various social media: YouTube, OCCN Facebook page, LWVOA website and Facebook page, and the Cable Co-op channel.

The following candidates agreed to participate:

Representative to Congress 4th District: Sharon Freshour, Democrat; Steve Perkins, Libertarian (Jim Jordan, Republican, did not respond.)

More About Kendal's Residents

Donna and Larry Steele

Donna:
My hometown is Massillon, OH, also known as Football Town USA. As a member of the marching band, I marched up and down the field many times and watched as our football team won a number of state championships. Our band even marched in the Tournament of Roses Parade in 1956 when I was a senior.

While I was at Ohio State University, the football team also won a number of titles, but alas, women were not allowed to march in the band.

My degree is in nursing, a career that has offered me many varied opportunities. I stopped working for a while when our three children were very young but was able to pick up my career again working part time at Princeton Hospital.

Then I earned a master’s in nursing at New York University and went on to teach nursing in several colleges in the New Jersey area.

I retired from Educational Testing Service where I worked with a group to move the Nursing Licensing Exam from paper and pencil to a computerized adaptive test. Now candidates can schedule their exam for a time that suits them without hundreds of people in a huge exam room and no choice as to date or time.

My husband, Larry, and I have lived in Ohio, Illinois, California, and New Jersey and managed to travel to all 50 states, usually camping in a tent.

After the children were on their own, we took up biking and traveled in New England, Canada, and much of western Europe. With our five granddaughters, we have traveled to experience hot air ballooning, crafts, NASA projects, snorkeling, and much more.

Our daughter, Diana Steele, and her husband live in Oberlin, with two of our granddaughters. Our two sons and their families live in Seattle and the Bay Area.
I enjoy traveling, sewing, reading, biking, and kayaking.

Larry:
Although I was born in Manhattan, KS, I lived in five different states before my family settled down in Ohio when I was age eight.

My father had been at Wright-Patterson AFB when he retired from the service. Both parents had come from farming families and believed that a farm would be the best place to raise their four sons. They bought a 40-acre farm west of Springfield, OH, and became weekend farmers, with one cow and some hogs and chickens.

After I graduated from Ohio State as a chemical engineer, I went to Argonne National Lab near Chicago to learn about nuclear engineering. That experience inspired me to go on for a PhD. I could do the coursework back in Columbus and the research work at Argonne.

I met Donna at Ohio State. We both worked in a dormitory, busing tables. We were married in Norwalk, OH, and moved to California once we had both finished our educations.

My job there turned out to be all paperwork. I ached to get back to the experimental, hands-on work. That opportunity came from Columbia U., studying the effects of radiation on chemical reactions at a swimming-pool nuclear reactor near Princeton.

That job lasted about three years. No industry was finding much use for all the radiation that would be available from nuclear reactors. At that point I was open to other opportunities.

For the next 32 years at Bristol-Myers/Squibb, I helped develop many pharmaceuticals, worked in many countries, and thoroughly enjoyed my work.

After retirement we traveled a lot, many times with Road Scholar. We especially enjoyed biking in Europe and Canada. We have also taken all but the youngest of our five granddaughters on Road Scholar trips.
I enjoy biking, golfing, kayaking, gardening, and raising orchids.

Joyce Lemonyedes

I was born and raised in Missouri – and am delighted to return to the Midwest after living more than five decades in New York.

In my hometown, Springfield, I received my undergraduate degree at Southwest Missouri State College. Then I enjoyed three gratifying years teaching English in a suburban St. Louis high school. A few of my students there have become life-long friends.

Next I went to the University of Arkansas where I studied literature under erudite professors including one who actually made learning the structure of the English language exciting and fun. After getting my MA degree, I was ready to explore other horizons, so I took a challenging position in the English department at Hofstra University on Long Island, NY. I was younger than many of my adult students so I probably learned as much I taught.
It turned out to be a momentous move for another reason. Down the down the street from Hofstra, I met a GP who made house calls and typically treated three generations in one family. After marrying this amazing Greek physician,
I continued teaching at Hofstra. Soon we delighted in raising our daughter Heather.

After a few years of being mother and teacher, I returned to graduate school and earned a PhD in English at Stony Brook University, specializing in British poetry.

Eventually I returned to high school teaching as head of an English department in a Long Island high school. I happily continued in this position until my retirement.

Retirement included being an SAT and ACT tutor and several years volunteering as a teacher of English to immigrants. But retirement also allowed time to pursue my passions for gardening, reading, travel, and visiting art museums.

One of our greatest joys was watching our daughter grow up and pursue a profession as an art historian. That journey brought her to Cleveland and eventually me to Kendal at Oberlin.

I was born and raised in East Cleveland, OH. We were in a changing neighborhood that completed its rapid transition while I completed my BA degree in psychology at Thiel College.

With a brief interlude as a rock-& roll musician along with an equally brief marriage, I exited my youth as a

Notes From the Program Committee

There are two things that the Program Committee would like you to know as this Kendalight goes to press.

1. The Program Committee needs feedback on the programs and movies you are watching. Please take time to send your comments (appreciation or boos) to Ken Cheek (movies), the program presenter or sponsor, or me (Shirley). We don’t know if you’re watching.

2. The Program Committee is looking for programs. Do you have an idea for a speaker or a program? Are you willing to sponsor a program? We are making good strides with technology and can offer technical support to make your program happen. But – we need you to get the program ideas and resources to us.

Programs have always been an important educational and entertaining part of our life at Kendal. Please help us keep them going.

Local Books

The Library has two small nonfiction collections probably unknown to most users. One is the “Ohio” (OH) collection, the other, the “Oberlin” (OB) collection. Neither collection was developed by design. Rather, they are the result of donations over the years. Both are located on the low shelving at the rear of the room.

Among the books in the Ohio Collection are several that invite the reader to explore Ohio, such as Off the Beaten Path. These have short descriptions of towns, maps, some photos. Several books focus on this region, originally known as the Western Reserve and the Firelands. There’s an oldie, Walter Havighurst’s The Long Ships, written in 1942 about the early history of shipping on the Great Lakes. There is an Encyclopedia of Cleveland and a substantial Birds of Ohio. For fun there is Haunted Ohio and Unsung Heroes; Ohioans in the White House. A Kendal connection is in several books by Alta Heiser of the family of Karl Heiser II, a Kendal founder.

The Oberlin collection is more “personal.” There is a two-volume scholarly history of the College and two biographies of John Frederick Oberlin, and a variety of histories of aspects of the college and the town, such as Nat Brandt’s The Town that Started the Civil War. For fun for those who know of Oberlin’s unsuccessful football program, there is When Oberlin Was King of the Gridiron.

There is a collection of newspaper columns by Marion Bradley Kelley who wrote “Day by Day” for both the Oberlin News Tribune and the Plain Dealer. For more serious readers there is Elusive Utopia: The Struggle for Social Equality in Oberlin, Ohio, by Oberlin professors Gary J. Kornblith and Carol Lasser. One of the most popular books with Kendal readers is A Place on Glacial Till, by OC professor Thomas Fairchild Sherman, a concise, elegant account of the natural history of the land we live on over hundreds of millions of years.

These two collections are numbered in an unusual way but that won’t hamper your enjoyment. The collections invite browsing, and readers will enjoy coming across the unexpected. You are invited to spend an afternoon doing just that.

The Rising of the Moon

The full Hunter Moon rises on Sat., Oct. 31, at 10:51am. It’s called a blue moon since there are two full moons in October this year. Full Harvest Moon rises on Oct. 1. A full moon on Halloween occurs roughly once every 19 years.

A friend in the Stephens Care Center keeps asking me how things are in the outside community. She has been quarantined in the SCC and misses seeing the outside. I picked some flowers from Wildflower Hill and sent a bouquet to her in the SCC. She was thrilled to get a connection with the rest of the community.

STAY CONNECTED
From The John Bartram Arboretum: Pawpaw Tree (Asimina Triloba) for Zebra Swallowtail Butterflies

Did you know that trees as well as flowers are hosts for butterflies? In fact, the pawpaw tree is the only host for the zebra swallowtail butterfly.

Native to the woodlands of the eastern United States, this tree is hardy in USDA zones 4-8 (Oberlin falls about mid-range). It grows in a conical shape and at maturity is somewhere in the neighborhood of 12-20 feet tall. Thus in the woodlands it grows naturally as an understory tree.

The pawpaw tree has maroon flowers in mid-spring. We think of the way they hang as upside down. Each flower can produce several fruits; you can see such clusters in the photos. The female stigma does not mature when that tree’s pollen is ripe, so a tree won’t set fruit with its own pollen. You need several pawpaw trees in proximity because each requires pollination from an unrelated pawpaw tree. In several locations at Kendal’s John Bartram Arboretum several pawpaws have been planted near each other. Crawling insects do some pollination, but if humans really want to get fruit it is more reliable to hand pollinate. This is what is being done here.

This rather small tree is much loved by some for what they regard as its delicious fruit. Other folks don’t much like the fruit. If you’ve never tasted the fruit, it has been described as something between mango and banana. Some call the fruit the custard apple, others the banango.

The zebra swallowtail butterfly does not need the fruits, only the leaves. The pawpaw leaves are toxic to many other predators, but not to the zebra swallowtail caterpillar.

As far as I know, we have not yet seen that butterfly here at the John Bartram Arboretum. So keep your eye out for a zebra swallowtail butterfly and let us know if you see one. Taking a photo of it for verification would be helpful!

Yes, trees can support butterfly species, and the pawpaw tree is in that group.

Nest Box News and More
All nest boxes are empty of bird families, but they still need to be cleaned out and winterized for the birds who might not migrate. Bluebirds, for instance, do not always head south and have been known to pack themselves into a single nest box for warmth at night. Winterizing means plugging up cracks and crevices withputy to reduce cold and drafts, and perhaps adding a layer of Styrofoam for insulation. Some years, the only wintering critters are field mice. So we shall see.

Meanwhile, Monarch butterflies have laid eggs on the underside of milkweed leaves. Some hatched into larvae that grew large with beautifully green, black, and yellow stripes. When found, they are put in a net cage to protect them from predator wasps who lay eggs in the larva in which they hatch and feast. When the larva is about two inches long and fat, it attaches itself to a leaf by one thread, curls up, sloughs its skin, and becomes a jeweled chrysalis with tiny gold dots in a corona around the upper edge. In about a week, the chrysalis darkens until black as the developing Monarch butterfly becomes visible in the chrysalis. When it emerges, it unfolds and flaps its wings slowly to pump them full of blood. And then “lift off!” Away it flies. The Kendal Early Learning Center has had an opportunity to watch this metamorphosis and to release an orange Monarch butterfly into the outdoors.

A Different Kind Of Staff Anniversary Recognition

Every fall we celebrate Kendal staff tenure anniversaries of 5, 10, 15, 20, and 25 years’ service. Human Resources did not want this year’s 27 honored staff anniversaries to go unrecognized due to the pandemic’s preventing our usual recognition luncheon and celebratory community presentation.

Barbara Thomas is inviting each of this year’s honored group to appear as a guest on her October weekly Zoom Exchanges beginning Thurs., Oct. 8, at 4:00pm, continuing each week in October until we have recognized them all.

We are celebrating all anniversary staff members on Thurs., Oct. 8, with a special cupcake, anniversary gift, and flower to wear that day so all their coworkers will know to say Congratulations and Thank You! All residents and staff will receive a celebratory cupcake, too! The 2020 anniversary staff honorees are:

- 5 Years – Megan King, Tammy Lane, Sarah Parsh, Becca Pettry, Ivan Smith, William Thompson, Christopher Twymon, Marquell Walden, Donna Weber, Emily Williams, Virginia Wolf
- 10 Years – Maureen Bailey, Maribelle Holly, Ken Menefee, Deshell Penny, Kim Peters
- 15 Years – Karen Moore
- 20 Years – JoDee Palmer, Kim Preston, Sue Rogers
- 25 Years – Lisa Blackford, Sandi Bockmore, Janice Foster, Kathy Helke, Terry Kovach, Jean Nickles, Regina Shumate

We’ve Made Some Changes to the Bulletin Board

Our Kendal Links! bulletin board has been revamped. Residents have requested a Resident Activities section for posters/announcements of on-site activities (programs, movies, etc.), as was the case before March 2020, and we’ve listened! Space has now been made for approved Kendal-based live and virtual activities, as appropriate.

Other links to virtual activities worldwide or “live” community activities (e.g., local museum hours) continue to be posted on the Town and Gown board. The other sections of Kendal Links! (Keeping Safe, Connecting with Others) as well as Kendal Personals like the birthday list or networking (offers and requests) continue. Bulletin board policies are posted.

Please route any posters or announcements about Kendal activities to the Bulletin Board open box for review.

Important: As the election cycle intensifies, it is imperative that no partisan materials, candidate ads, or political announcements of any kind be posted. All “general” information about voting/ballot procedures has been moved under Town and Gown. If you have questions about bulletin board use and policies, contact Anne Martin or Fran Cooper, Bulletin Board co-chairs.

Dining Matters

The Dining Matters Committee has been discussing possible changes to dining when the COVID crisis has ended and we are able to return to Heiser. While dining will likely never be the same as before, we’re looking at ways to make our future experiences as safe and as pleasant as possible.

One change under discussion for when more normal times return is to tailor the current policy so that independent living residents have three options for meals: (1) receive the contractual one meal a day, (2) opt out of meals altogether, or (3) choose a partial meal plan. The details remain tentative and are still being discussed. Residents in the Stephens Care Center will continue to receive three meals per day.

Implementing changes requires replacing the computer software used to track purchases and integrate with our personal resident accounts. It will take time for that system to be installed, but we are confident that we will have that capability by the time we are able to dine in Heiser again.

Part of adapting the current policy will be determining the appropriate cost of meals, once the expense of single-use containers is no longer such a significant factor. As always, we need to factor in the overhead costs to maintain the kitchen and dining rooms as well as cost of personnel to prepare and serve the meals.
